The top two screenshots are from an 'LA fitness' e-learning module titled 'Up-Selling Products and Packages'. The first screenshot shows a 'Skill Check 1' with a multiple-choice question: 'Among the following, who need to be made aware of the LAF products?' with options for 'Fit Staff', 'HR Executives', 'Fitness Staff', and 'Members'. The second screenshot shows 'Product Awareness' with a list of roles: 'Fit Staff', 'HR (Staff Awareness)', 'Fitness Staff', and 'Members', each with a checkmark indicating completion. The bottom screenshot is from 'TheCyberInstitute' and is titled 'Customer Service Essentials'. It features a section on 'Perceptions on customer service' with a bar chart showing percentages for different actions: '% who call 20 or more times', '% who call 10 times', '% who did not come back', and '% who don't complain'. The chart shows that the highest percentage of people who called 20 or more times also called 10 times, and that a significant portion of people who called 20 or more times did not come back.

The screenshot shows a section titled 'Effective communication' with a pie chart and a list of skills: 'Listening', 'Speaking', and 'Writing'. The pie chart is divided into three segments, and the list of skills has corresponding input fields for percentages.
